

Guidelines for MADISON COOPERATIVE DEVELOPMENT COALITION Grant Program

November, 2017

The Madison Cooperative Development Coalition (MCDC) is a collaborative of community-based organizations, labor unions and cooperative developers. MCDC works to support the growth and creation of worker cooperatives, specifically addressing the factors affecting local communities of color, low wealth and traditionally excluded workforces. The goal is to create a sustainable system that will combat poverty, empower workers and increase equity in order to strengthen Madison's long-term economic health.

The aim of the mini-grant program is to address our goal by building the capacity of community-based organizations to help create and support cooperatives. We're looking for creative initiatives that will support these objectives. These are some of the types of initiatives that could receive funding:

- Support for community organizing to identify potential cooperative groups
- Workshop and education program development
- Support for integrating the cooperative model into existing business or entrepreneurship training programs.
- Support for staff training and capacity building to help organize cooperatives
- Support for providing assistance to cooperative start-up groups.
